The Fourth of July is this weekend, and with that comes fireworks, family gatherings, and BBQs, oh my! There is no doubt that this 4th may look a bit different from previous years. The United States of America was founded on ideals of freedom, justice, and liberty, and each 4th of July, the nation takes a moment to reflect on those ideals and celebrate the country's independence. So this Independence Day weekend, as you read this newsletter that exemplifies the most American ethics, it's important to remember the people who have sacrificed to make the United States a safer, more prosperous and much wealthier for all of us. It is just as important to reflect on the ways that certain groups of people are treated in this country. One of the most patriotic acts you can do this 4th of July is to look inward, reflect on your perspectives and own observations, and make active choices to ensure that America works for every member of our society and treats everyone with dignity and respect.

Those articles in this newsletter exemplified the beauty and moral triumph of this great nation. Let's work together to ensure America remains the world leader in humanitarian and prosperity.

Also, regardless of where you are in our county during this holiday, remember the coronavirus is still here, and it isn’t going away any time soon. We encourage you to stay safe, keep your distance. And as always, wash those hands, and mask up. Educate your friends and family and set a positive example for those around you.

Let’s all continued to follow safety guidelines and practice social distancing to help protect ourselves and the community.

May our great nation continue to prosper. Wishing everyone a very safe and happy Fourth of July.

How is Global Paint for Charity different from other paint recycling programs?
Global Paint for Charity is one of the few paint recycling programs that can offer a tax deduction of fair market value for paint awarded to an individual or family in need. Our organization was founded with the purpose of providing a win-win solution. If you have leftover paint or discontinued products that you are thinking of getting rid of, consider donating it to Global Paint for Charity to help us continue our Mission.
